

University of Strathclyde Business School – Master of Business Administration (MBA)

The University of Strathclyde Business School (SBS) and CIMA have entered an exclusive agreement which affords members direct entry onto the Strathclyde MBA.

CIMA members qualify for the CIMA-Strathclyde scholarship which offers an attractive reduction on tuition fees.

SBS is internationally respected as one of the most innovative and largest business schools in Europe. The quality of its programmes is recognised by the three global accreditation bodies, AMBA, EQUIS and AACSB. This triple accreditation together with its research excellence and global rankings put Strathclyde in a small, elite group of business schools in the world.

The Strathclyde MBA is offered as a full-time, part-time or flexible learning programme, and is also offered part-time via one of our nine international centres: Switzerland, Greece, Singapore, Hong Kong, Malaysia, Dubai, Abu Dhabi, Bahrain and Oman. All modes of study, no matter the location, achieve the same qualification – the Strathclyde MBA.

The Strathclyde MBA is based on collaborative learning – students share work experience, knowledge, understanding and skills. Students should be highly motivated, experienced individuals who want to get the utmost from an intensive and rigorous programme.

Designed around four modules – the Reflective Practitioner, Making the Business Work, Strategic Management, and Personal Development – the Strathclyde MBA will introduce students to a wide range of tools, techniques and theories relevant to both everyday management and strategic change.

Throughout the Strathclyde MBA, individual skills and potential will be developed through initiatives such as personal development plans where students make their personal, education and career objectives clear and monitor progress towards achieving those goals.

Students are able to tailor their MBA by choosing electives from a wide range of classes, made possible by a large pool of academic experts across a wide range of specialist departments.

The final part of the course is the project, which allows students to examine in depth a managerial, organisational or environmental issue of their choice over an extended period of time.

Assessment throughout the programme involves a combination of course work, workshops, examinations, group work and presentations.
