Managing risky relationships: Risk management and management control in inter-firm relationships

Overview of the talk:
This talk builds on the findings of recent studies to discuss how firms use contracts and management controls to manage risks in inter-firm relationships. It considers the specific risk types that firms encounter when engaging in inter-firm collaboration, and control solutions to mitigate and manage those risks. Particular emphasis is provided to the incomplete nature of the controls used to manage inter-firm risk, and the cost-benefit tradeoff that firms need to make in deciding on inter-firm control investments. The discussion will be extended by considering the implications of cross-border relationships for inter-firm risk and control investments.

Speaker’s Profile:
Professor Henri Dekker is a Professor of Management Control in the Department of Accounting at VU University Amsterdam. Henri’s research interests span management control and accounting in inter-firm alliances, strategy and management control design, and performance measurement and incentive compensation. Henri has published extensively in leading journals including; Journal of Accounting Research; Management Science; Organization Science; Accounting, Organizations and Society; Management Accounting Research; and Journal of Management Accounting Research. Henri’s research has been recognised with numerous awards such as the 2012 Notable Contribution to the Management Accounting Literature Award (AAA), the Greatest Impact on Management Accounting Practice Award (AAA), and the David Solomon’s Prize (MAR). Henri currently is Associate Editor at the European Accounting Review and Management Accounting Research, and serves on the editorial boards of Accounting, Organizations and Society and Journal of Management Accounting Research.
